SENIORS AT LAST!

In the Senior year the focus is more upon the individual than at any other time. His achievements are noted; his future is decided; praises are lauded upon him; and the results of twelve years of work are finally realized.

Yet, the Senior class is bound together by the knowledge that upon graduation they will no longer be known as a class, but as 480 individuals.

AN END AND A BEGINNING

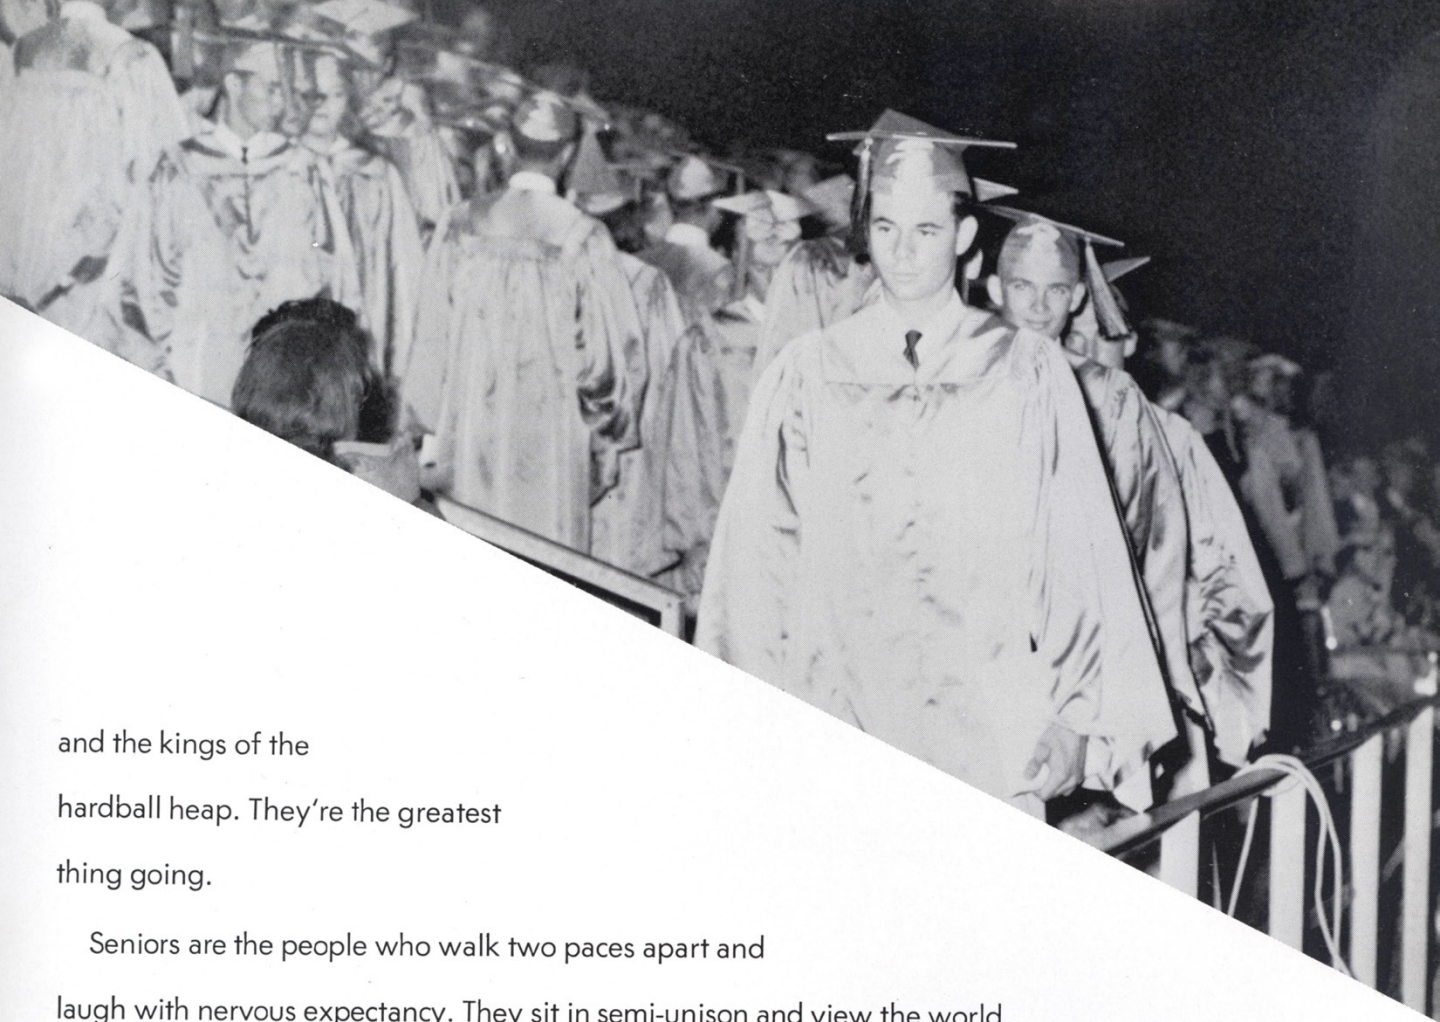

GRADUATION 1965

SENIORS are the reigning monarchs, now deposed. They're the culmination of 12 years of organized education. They're another generation thrust from the impartial workings of the public school system into the impartial competition of a mechanized world. They're the be-all and end-all of high school and the ho-dads of teen-age society. Next year they'll be the gremmies of young adulthood.

Seniors are class rings turned the right way, tassels swinging slowly but steadily to the right, chicken on senior day. They're the ogres of the pep rallies and the dictators of everything important.

Seniors are 72 points for homecoming and the highest scoring basketball team in history. They're the triumphant underdogs of the track world and the kings of the hardball heap. They're the greatest thing going.

Seniors are the people who walk two paces apart and laugh with nervous expectancy. They sit in semi-unison and view the world through strands of gold tassel. Seniors are the slowest ones in the hall and the fastest ones out.

"NBC" and "surfers rule," "The dawn of today is upon us, what shall we do 'after' dusk?", the Brotherhood: all of these are seniors. Seniors are "Arsenic and Old Lace" and to a great extent, "Oklahoma!". They are the beachcombers and intellectuals, they are average and not so average. Seniors are everybody and everything that has to do with a last year of high school.

Seniors are the people who'll be in command in another twenty years. They'll be the ones on the Senate floor, the ones in the concrete blockhouses, the ones whose footprints will cover the moon. They will be the explorers, the scientists, the bums, the cab drivers. They represent the future. To them belongs the responsibility of deciding whether or not to have a future. They have a long way to go but so they have come a long way . . . the seniors are tomorrow.
