FROM THE EDITOR

You will probably turn through the pages of your yearbook several times before your eyes come to rest on this page, and, no doubt, you will notice the many new and different features which have been added to the Pasadenian this year.

First of all, is the modern theme which is achieved with the use of abstract designs and lines. It begins on the cover and runs throughout the book.

Another noticeable feature is the cut-off pages containing the buildings and alma mater. Each building at P.H.D.S. is pictured on these pages although some of them are not as attractive as we would like them to be.

Of course, the most striking and attractive object in the book is the colored picture of "Old Baldy." The staff is very proud of this page, and we hope you like it, too. It is followed by another added feature, a section which portrays a typical day with a Pasadena Eagle.

Other improvements in the Pasadenian this year are the activity pictures which are used to liven up the Administration and Classes sections, and . . . more autograph pages.

This book could not have been produced without the help and co-operation of the student body, faculty, and a wonderful staff. My thanks go to all of these people.

The aim of the Pasadenian Staff of 1956 was to produce a yearbook worthy of Pasadena High School, and one that would tell the story of your school year at P.H.S. We sincerely hope that we have succeeded in these aims and that YOU enjoy each and every page of this, your

A DAY WITH

Main Building is deserted

At six o'clock in the morning, the Main Building is deserted. Then, as students begin to arrive by bus, car, and on foot, Pasadena High School buzzes with activity. The favorite gathering place is the Cafeteria, where they may get left over homework, listen to the jukebox, and buy cold drinks and doughnuts.

Homeroom

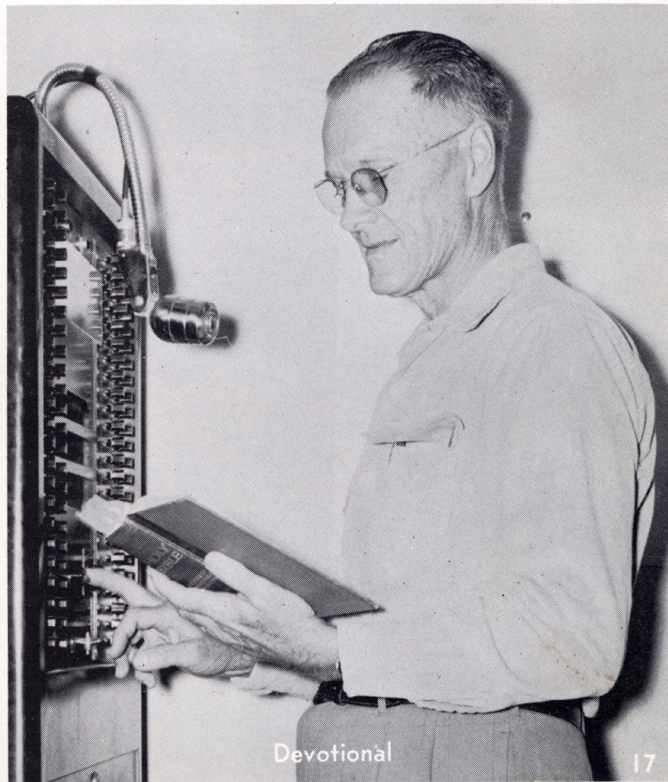

Announcements

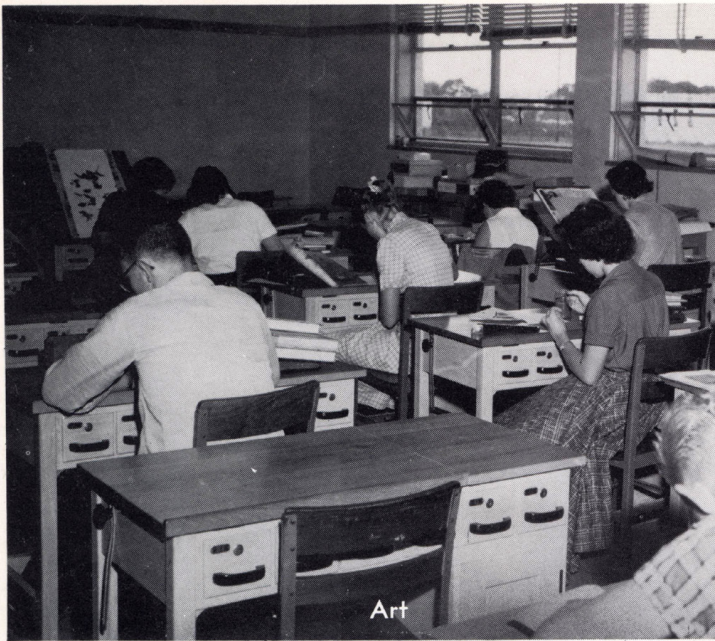

The bell to go to homeroom rings at eight twenty-five. Here, the roll is called, students may study, and Mr. White makes the important announcements of the day. Of course, there are always some who are tardy and must go to Mrs. Stubbs for admits. The homeroom period is dismissed each morning with a devotional by Mr. Peachey.

Typing

Classes begin and continue through the day with interesting and varied activities. Students are given a chance to develop their talent in Art. In Home Economics, girls learn the skills of cooking and sewing. Some students take Typing or Auto Mechanics, subjects which may be used in later life. Sometimes classes have extra activities such as speeches by visitors.

Lunch Time

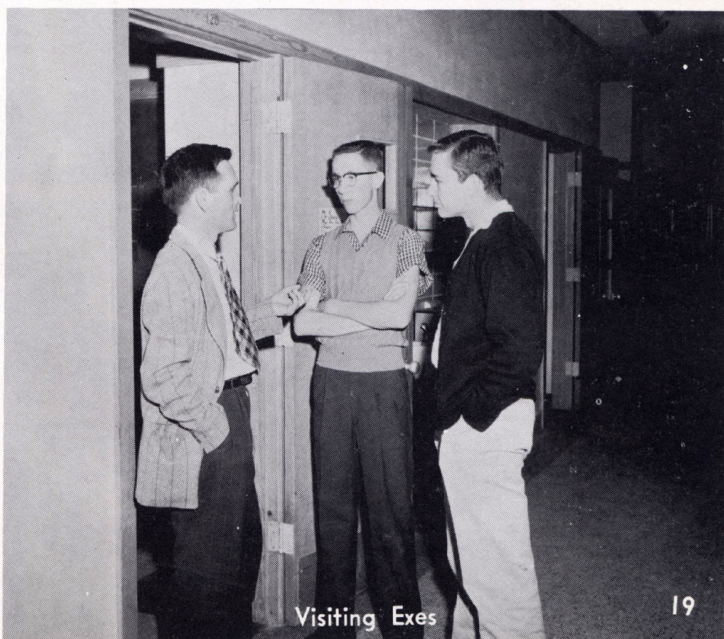

Lunch time, the best part of the school day, comes during the fourth period. Because of the limited space in the cafeteria and the rapid growth of our student body, there are four separate lunch periods. Many students spend their spare time in the library, which provides a quiet place for study. Teachers sometimes take time off to visit with ex-students. Our counselors are kept busy throughout the day helping students to solve their numerous problems.

Drugstore Scene

The last bell rings at three thirty-five, and students board the buses to go home, or stop at a nearby drugstore for a refreshing coke. However, this is not the end of the school day for many. Our athletes remain after school each day to practice whatever sport is in season.

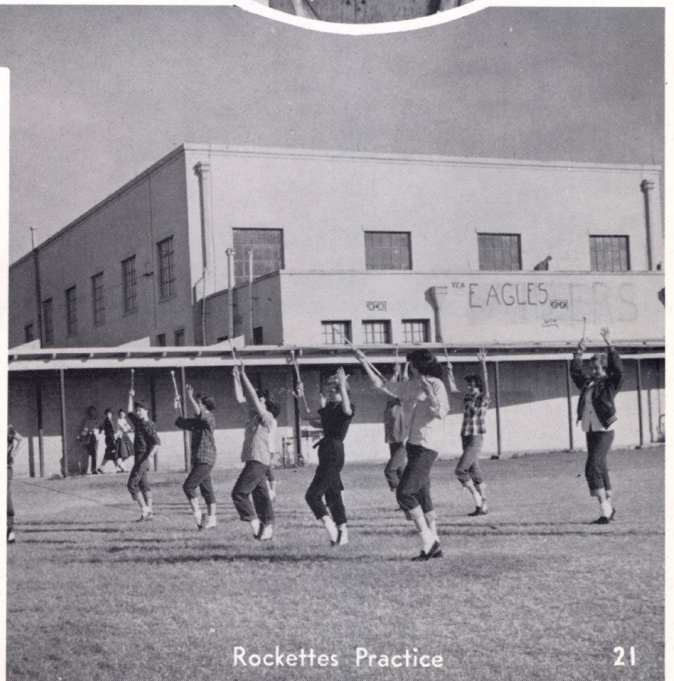

The Rockettes and the PHS Band also put in long hard hours of practice after school. And there are some students who like school so well that they find other excuses for staying . . . detention hall.
